

About the Workshop

The Teaching Learning Centre, CIT, is organizing a one day colloquium on the art of proposal writing on June 13 2020. The theme of this two day workshop is to motivate faculty members to submit project proposals seeking project grant to national funding agencies. Eminent scientists, academicians and senior officials from national funding agencies will give lectures on how to formulate effective project proposals for getting research grant. The participants will be guided and helped to project the key research elements, originality, novelty, and techno-economical aspects of the project and make them more competitive. With grants becoming more difficult to obtain, this workshop will help the delegates in drafting effective research proposals in thrust research areas to get research grants.

Some of the aspects covered in the workshop include:

- Key element of the proposal and budget development
- How are grant proposal reviewed and awarded
- Top 10 reasons why a proposal is rejected
- How to find the right funding program
- Importance of developing resilience
