One-Week (Hybrid) Short Term Training Programme on

Indian Knowledge Systems and Values in Higher Education

6 - 13 February 2026

[First 3-Days (6,7,8) Residential and last 3-Days (11,12,13) Online]

STTP Overview:

Indian knowledge system embodies practically everything about India, which has more than 5000 years of recorded history, culture, literature, science, engineering, technology, philosophy, art and sustainable life style system. Indian knowledge systems and human values have transformed the Indian subcontinent into an evolved and introspective society by establishing the self-guiding systems. This program is structured around the Indigenous body of knowledge, philosophies, architecture and practices. A contemporary perspective on Indian Knowledge Systems (IKS) and the Universal Human Values (UHV) core concepts will be presented as proposals for participants to consider and validate through self-reflection. The modern research methodologies, practical experiential validation, and tools related to IKS will be actively shared and discussed. In an era of rapid technological change, this course offers a critical grounding in values-based living and professional competence. The program presents a contemporary perspective on IKS and UHV as a framework for making ethical, people-friendly, and eco-friendly decisions. The content is delivered as proposals for experiential validation, empowering individuals to develop the 'Right Understanding' required to build a socially conscious, successful career and contribute to the 'Universal Human Order'.
